RANDOM NOTES AND COMMENTS

The Wrong and the Right Way to Dispose of a Collection

"My wish is that my Drawings, my Prints, my Curiosities, my Books—in a word, these things of art which have been the joy of my life—shall not be consigned to the cold tomb of a museum, and subjected to the stupid glance of the careless passer-by, but I require that they shall all be dispersed under the hammer of the Auctioneer, so that the pleasure which the acquiring of each one of them has given me shall be given again, in each case, to some inheritor of my own tastes."

From the Will of Edmond de Goncourt

AUCTION VIEWS

From a Well Known Dealer

"Your comments concerning auction bidders' remarks are interesting. Two related experiences of my own come to mind: At a public auction sale a collector wanted Lots 50 and 280. He wanted just one lot, not both. His instructions were: "If I don't buy Lot 280, then increase my bid on Lot 50." The mechanics of how to do this were rather puzzling! The second experience, and this is an experience that has happened several times — I am sure you have had this situation also — concerns a gentleman who submitted a bid of $100 on a coin which had a catalogue value of $30. This particular coin must have been underpriced in the catalogue, but for whatever reason the coin was bid up on the floor to $37.50 — and was then sold to the mail bidder for $40. Upon receiving the coin the mail bidder returned it with the notation, "I am returning the coin herewith. I certainly wouldn't want to pay $40 for a coin that only catalogues for $30. I didn't expect that it would bring more than catalogue; my high bid was just to be sure that I would be the one who got it."

From a Collector

"I am very well pleased with the coin (lot 967), and I was especially delighted to find that I had obtained it for something less than my full maximum bid. I know that many lesser dealers would not hesitate to charge me the full amount of my bid regardless of how much lower the next highest bid might be, and it is a pleasure to do business with an honest firm, where the auction rules are still observed in the traditionally fair way.

I look forward to receiving the prices realized from this sale when it is released, and to bidding regularly in your auction sales in the future, as I have done in the past.

Wayne C. Phillips"

LETTERS

Thoughts By An Old Customer

"Your recent edition (XII, 1) had more of the chatty correspondence that makes for journalistic interest, than usual. After reading it, I had a feeling that there were a good many trivia involved.

One gentleman made a great spread of the fact that he had bought a piece at a bargain price, and expects finally to profit from his specialized knowledge. On the next page you had the courage to print the facts of a collector's experience, which shows that from the investment standpoint he could have done much better in any of several investment media.

I suppose that if I had a dollar for every extremely rare 'pattern' or 'trial piece' that I have been shown I could finance my own trip to the moon. My answer always is, 'If this is a true rarity its main value comes when it is associated with other compatible pieces in a collection. Therefore you should sell it. Offer it to a competent dealer and show me the bill of sale.' Believe it or not, I have never seen one of these receipts!

My advice to inexperienced collectors is, that a meaningful collection can't be built on bargains. Sure, we are all acquisitive enough to enjoy beating the market. However, this incessant concentration on price becomes a bore when a collector has started in a direction which he has finally decided is worth pursuing.

Which brings me to the electrum stater of Carthage, mail bid sales, and grading. The comments on the electrum mostly boil down to a criticism of the description offered in the catalog of the sale. Having been on both sides, offering and buying (albeit in a small way) I find there is much to be said for the dealer and for the buyer.

I very much dislike getting coins that are scraped or nicked. On the other hand, each derogatory word in the description knocks the price received by a disproportionate amount. However, I can't have it both ways: I have for years been urging my dealer friends to tighten their standards of grading. This decade would be a wonderful time to do so, when everything numismatic sells for enormous and constantly rising prices. Let's get back to plain English: The words 'Very Fine' don't mean a coin that has the detail worn off, plus cracks, nicks, corrosion and so on. 'Extra Fine' is that unusual specimen that started out from a die cut in good style, was struck evenly and centrally, and has survived with no damage from nature. We don't need the term 'Fleur de Coin' or other, except as a superlative.

This subject gets tiresome to dealers, editors and some collectors, for their own particular reasons. I simply say that if we stick to plain English meanings for descriptive words, the little things can take their places, according to the cataloguer's integrity.

Generally, my experience in buying from Coin Galleries has been 'acceptable' as far as grading is concerned. I have never felt 'my heart strangely warmed' by getting a specimen that was better than I might have expected, but neither can I remember returning a piece with the criticism that it was overgraded, a thing that I do freely and often when buying from other lists. There are still some people who are not trying to sell something as better than it is, and I feel that Coin Galleries is a big enough factor in the business to justify them lending their weight to improve the situation.

C. E. Rowe"

The Cost of Postage Would be Terrific

"Dear Gentlemen:

The local coin shop does not deal in Ancient coins, and suggested that I contact your firm. May I send it to you for an offer?

Truly,"

Difficult Numismatic and Family Conundrums

"Dear,

How do you tell a copper coin from a Gold coin dating back to 1504 — ¼ ore Swedish. Its a first made coin as that year my Grandfather minted coins (stamped them and made the coins). I can't find any information on this. Could you please tell me."

NOTE: This inquiry was received by Coin Galleries in 1971. The cataloguer is not personally acquainted with the writer. This is probably just as well, and not only on the grounds of age.

TERMS OF SALE

By sending in his Bid Sheet the Bidder agrees to the Terms of Sale as stated below.

1. All coins and medals offered in this catalogue are guaranteed to be genuine and as described.

BOOK REVIEW

by James C. Risk

Vermeule, Cornelius. NUMISMATIC ART IN AMERICA — Aesthetics of the United States Coinage. The Belknap Press of Harvard University Press. Cambridge, Massachusetts, 1971. 287 pages. 249 plates. $20.00.

Although coin collecting finally achieved the status of a publicly accepted indoor sport a century ago it did not reach a nearly universal popularity until after the end of the Second World War. During the last twenty-five years the hobby has been attracting people who reflect every aspect of the national economic, social and educational spectrum. This great upsurge of interest in numismatic artifacts naturally generated a demand for information about them. As a result the collector has been provided with a steady stream of books, pamphlets, articles, and much that masquerades as news.

Useful and informative as many of these publications sometimes are, the very popularity that created them carries with it a number of painfully obvious drawbacks. Without intending to denigrate enthusiasm, it must be recognized that the product of the great majority of today's numismatic authors suffers from severe limitations. It is not well informed and not particularly literate. Originality is submerged under constant repetition of the microscopically irrelevant and unimportant. By way of contrast, the book under review is very well informed, conspicuously literate, and original.

The name of Cornelius Vermeule will be familiar to many people in the numismatic world and to many others who are not. In 1953 he collaborated with Dr. Norman Jacobs in their popular "JAPANESE COINAGE," now in the process of being reprinted. In the intervening years he has become well known in the field of Archaeology and is at present Curator of Classical Art in the Boston Museum and lecturer on Fine Arts at Harvard. But apart from his successful professional career the author is a genuine specimen of that rare bird — the trained numismatist. In this area, as well as several others, he has benefited from a close association with Mary Comstock, the Boston Museum's Keeper of Coins. It follows that he is particularly qualified to consider the subject of our national coinage from a viewpoint seldom if ever adopted before in depth.

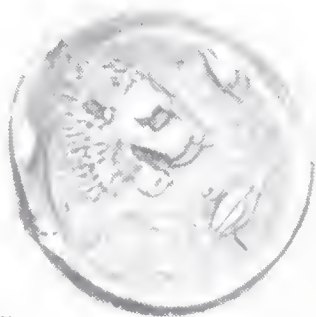

In discussing the aesthetics of American numismatic art Dr. Vermeule explains the influences brought to bear on the designs of coins and medals in this country from the early Republic to the present day. In the process he has given us a beautifully written and stimulating work. It is our good fortune that he has been well served by his publisher who has produced a splendidly printed and illustrated volume. The device of using many coins and medals (some enlarged and some not, depending on the size of the original) in broad margins assures the reader that the subject under discussion will be handily keyed to the text. In addition there are many plates of original artist's designs, trial strikes and even some of the classical sculpture that served as models, or as an inspiration for the artist.

It is just possible that there may be those collectors who, after considering the title of Dr. Vermeule's new book, will conclude that such things as art and aesthetics are not for them. We hope not. Such a Philistine attitude can only bring a deserved retribution. The author knows his subject, he can write with a deft touch and is gifted with a pleasantly sardonic sense of humor. Anyone interested in numismatics owes it to himself to read this book, not just for the fascinating things the author has to tell, but for the sheer pleasure of it.
